MAKING SURE OUR WORKERS ARE PART OF THE CONVERSATION

AT THE PORT OF LOS ANGELES

The Port plays a vital role in moving cargo, but its greatest strength is the hardworking men and women whose jobs support families and communities throughout LA.

Measure PRT requires the Port to disclose how certain major leases and development agreements could affect local jobs and workers, making sure those impacts are considered publically before decisions are made.

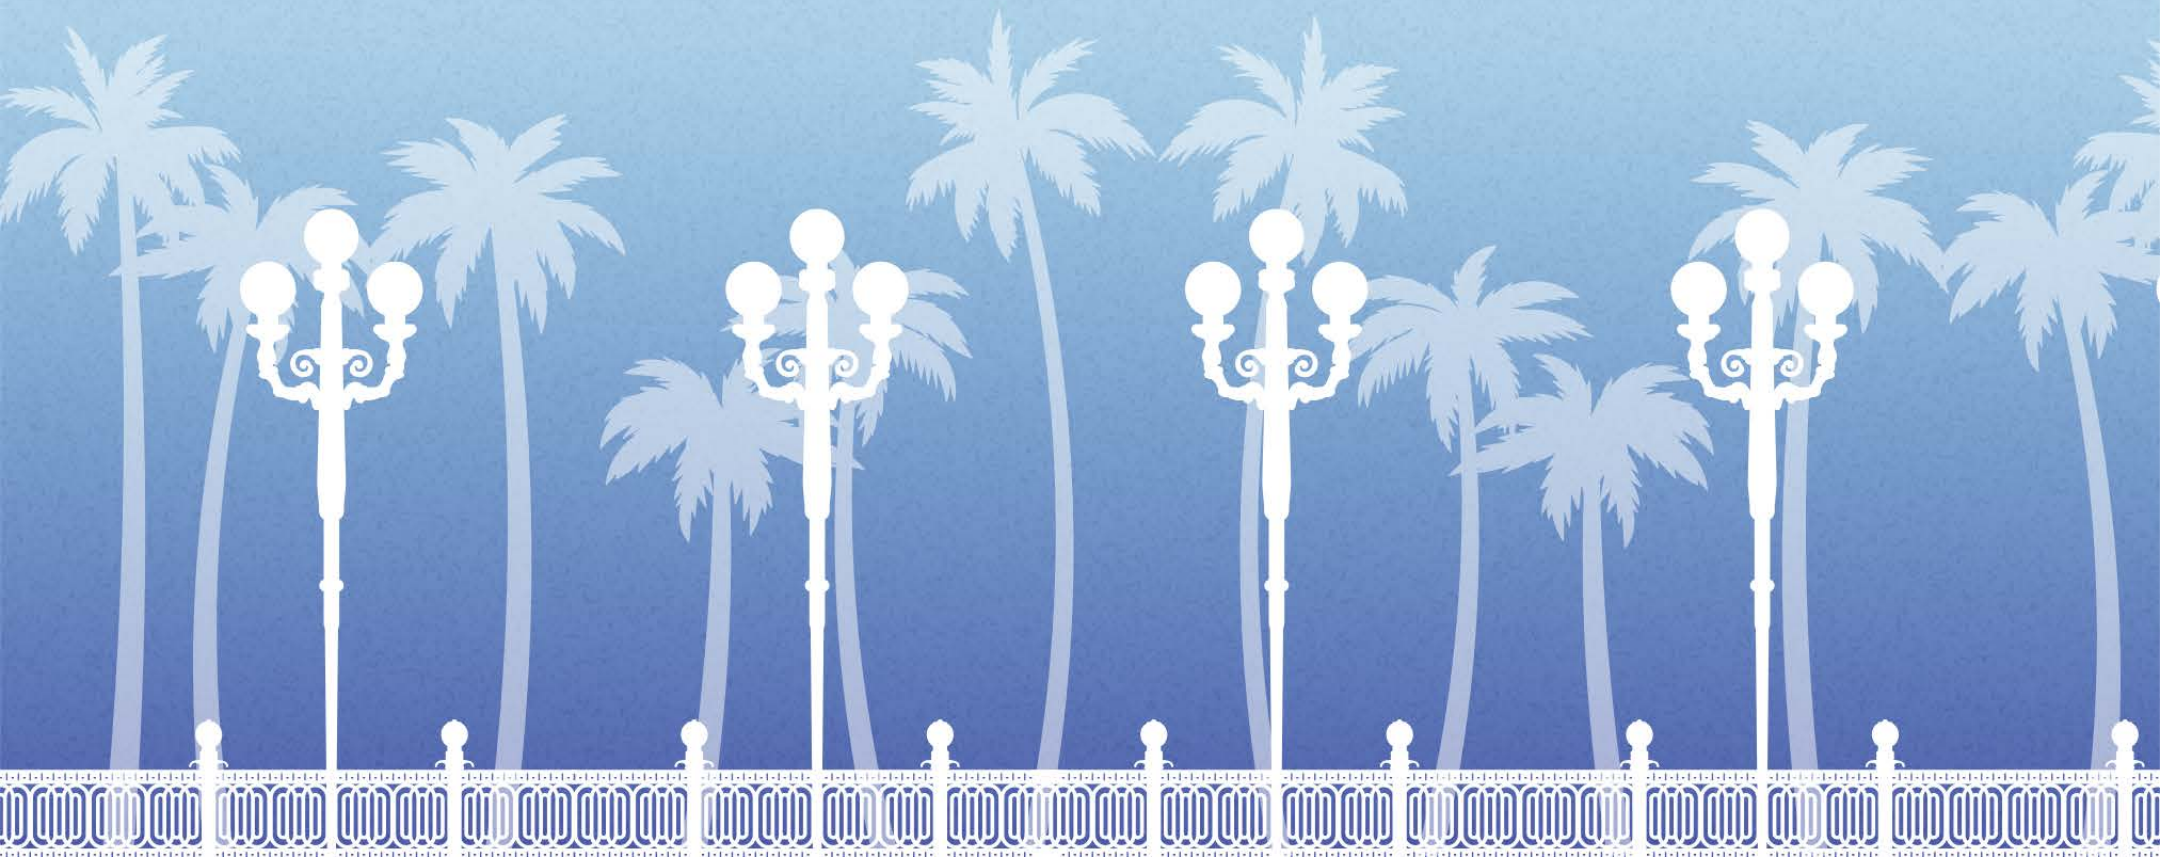

KEEPING INVESTMENTS IN OUR WATERFRONT

AT THE PORT OF LOS ANGELES

Our Harbor communities help keep the busiest container port in the Western Hemisphere running. They should also benefit from its success.

Measure PRT puts the Port's commitment to waterfront public access investments into the City Charter, helping protect investments in parks, public spaces, and waterfront access for generations to come.

Our Port and airports are vital to Los Angeles' economy, but their operations also have a direct impact on the people who live and work in the surrounding communities.

Those communities deserve a voice in the decisions that affect their daily lives. The workers who keep these operations running deserve to know how major decisions could affect their jobs and livelihoods. And the neighborhoods that support them deserve to benefit from continued local investment.

That's what Measure PRT is about: stronger community representation, protecting local jobs, and making sure the benefits of our Port and airports reach the people who live and work around them.
